Then it is your lucky..A facile and accurate method for the preparation of ofloxacin-based polydiacetylene nanoparticles and their application as a fluorescent sensor for Hg²⁺ ion. A facile and rapid approach has been developed for the preparation of ofloxacin (OFL) based polydiacetylene (PDA) nanoparticles (NPs) by conjugating OFL with the cationic PDA diblock polymer (GPC-PDA-mPEG) with improved dispersibility and fluorescence intensity. The fluorescence of PDA NPs is highly dependent on OFL concentrations. In turn, the fluorescence intensity is linearly responsive to the concentration of Hg(2+) ions in the range of 0.025-4.5μM. The distinct fluorescence color of the PDA NPs can be reversibly switched off and on by the addition of or removal of Hg(2+) ions, respectively. Moreover, the PDA NPs were successfully applied as a fluorescence probe to determine Hg(2+) ion in the environmental water samples. Owing to the merits of facile and simple preparation method, high selectivity and sensitivity, and high stability and specificity, the PDA NPs may hold great promise in the fields of fluorescent sensors and imaging./ DO NOT ALTER OR REMOVE COPYRIGHT NOTICES OR THIS HEADER.  Copyright (c) 1997-2017 Oracle and/or its affiliates.
